

~~XX~~ Seigneurie de la Pointe-aux-Lions

Année 1723

Dunkerque Sept 19th à Sept 20th

But nobody entertained a notion that these charges were to borne by the free. The King was to make the best bargain he could and the settlements were in the end to pay themselves over cost. And the bargains were to be different according to the different classes of settlers — one <sup>set of</sup> conditions with the soldiers, another with the Nouis Habitans. In fact he was to induce people to settle by meeting what it was presumed would be their wishes. (Take in)

Thus according to this plan the Company who really were the owners of the land were to be left out of consideration entirely. But at any rate the country was to be settled by people some of whom were to have more favorable terms — some a military allowance to pay. And it is suggested that the N. India Company may have a stake as claimed which they might grant to their vassals.

This is easily understood. As the King was to be at all the expense of settlement the Seigneur was to get very little rent. But this was only for settlements in villages and townships to be created before settlements. The next thing was to consider what should be done with persons who desired to settle on lands, and it is said that lands ought to be conceded to such persons if they would make hamlets and villets at their own expense. There is some further reference to this matter; but it is very obscure:—

This plan of 1667 was not adopted but the fact that it was proposed proves that the Crown about to bring out settlers itself intended to charge just such rates of rent as it might think proper and was going to take care to be remunerated for his outlay. I cannot say help suspecting that the broken piece of extract of Lucy and Talon's regulation in the 4th vol of the of the Seigniorial documents is a little piece of ~~the~~ this regulation. ~~In the said~~ ~~is said that it~~ requests <sup>that</sup> an Ordinance should be made "en voyant all inhabitants of the Country and all shaw pers possessing lands therein to declare what they possess."

 . . . . . so that it may be "ascertained whether the "Seigniors' ordinances have "had anything inserted in
 "the deeds given them by the "lord paramount of the "prejudeice of the rights of so "verignty". The object was not to see whether this supposed fideicommission had been carried out; but whether lands had been granted in a manner to interfere with that droit forcier, which seigneur had been instructed to introduce in favour of the King as quickly as he could. The Company of New France had granted in so extraordinary a manner that they wanted to know what the grants were. At the same time they admitted the grants to be & valid.

"Further on it is said: "it "will thus be ascertained
 "how much of the lands in "Canada is alleged to have "been distributed, how "much has been cleared
 "and improved how much
 "remains to be distributed
 "of those that are common"ly situated, whether "the grantees have complied "with the clauses inserted "in their contracts, and a "bove all whether by neg"lecting to do so they have "not impeded or retarded the "settlement of Canada." What "It is evidently still the idea "that the tracts granted
 "were to large that sovereign"ty might be superintended "upon property, and as it "was desired to give infor"mation to the King, an "extraordinary step was "taken recommended, which "was to prevent the M.
 "Horn Company or the Sieg"nors of fees making any "part of their lands to be
 "habitable, which in order "to be valid shall not "have been verified and
 "ratified by the persons "having power from the

"registered in the Office of the "Commissary of the said Com"pany." This was certainly a restriction of right; but a restriction made for a public object, — to avoid the scattering of the population. Hee was no idea of escheating the land; for that would have interfered with people of influence, such as religious orders and others powerful persons.
 Of course neither the longer or shorter of these documents had any practical consequence, as neither of them ever passed beyond the stage of projects.

A few years later, we find a despatch from Colbert to the Comte de Frontenac, in which the former again speaks of the reduction <sup>of the people</sup> into four grades and villages; but in which ~~while~~ he says this ~~project~~ <sup>however</sup> he fully admits the right of <sup>the Indians</sup> those persons & their property.

We have now reached the date of the second work of a trenchment 4th June 1672

Page 70 Sorts 10

This it will <sup>have</sup> <sup>been</sup> seen provides for the retrenchment of half the lands, the previous arrêt of 1653 having declared the forfeiture of the whole. But putting that aside I ask if this is a law which confiscates any property whatever?
It is on the contrary a mere order to M. Fabre to make a census of the country, and the people, requiring the latter to give a declaration of what they possessed, in consequence of which declaration, and not by it, <sup>the</sup> half of any lands ~~be~~ conceded ten years before and not cleared at all ~~should~~ ~~be~~ was to be taken back, <sup>and</sup> Fabre <sup>who</sup> should <sup>perhaps</sup> report them on certain specified terms. The law did nothing at all, except order something that Fabre was to do after he had made a census.
I shall show presently how long that census took to make, in the meantime until it is finished he can make no retrenchment.

Rather I should say even than I doubt whether he can do so; for I am not sure that the act is not reserved for the King.
 Whoeven ~~was~~ <sup>is</sup> to do it, it is certain that ~~the~~ <sup>the</sup> ~~Film~~ or the King must go be yond; his ~~dedication~~ <sup>dedication</sup> be fore they shall have carried out the confiscation: even the recense-ment will not be enough.
 Be it remembered that here as in Ormoulental ready & commented on there is no distinction between the sergent and the consulaire; all are alike subject to the rule such as it is. It follows that if on account of this arrest the sergent is supposed not to have property the application of the ~~same~~ reason will deprive the consulaire also. So Be all this as it may I ~~shall~~ state what I believe to be a fact, when I say that I believe ~~that~~ <sup>that</sup> there is never was an ordinance by which any one was condemned to this ~~half~~ <sup>half</sup> attachment

a negative of course; but I ask your Honour's satisfaction yourself as I have done by going through the records of the Jurisdiction of the Country, and I think you will not find an instance, in which you will be led by any circumstance to ~~think~~ suspect that half of any Seigniorie was escheated under the act. I shall show indeed from by a statement of the King himself that it could not have been carried out. Certainly Salva did take back and regrant many Seigniories, but this was done without any reference to this law. Thus in November and December 1662 he granted some one hundred proprietries in Lower Canada; <sup>but</sup> there is there mention of any preceding grants, or of what the King directed should be put into grants of lands thus recommended. That indeed is worth notice — that in none of the new grants which he made did he put

There is no bet, no record of such a thing and I am entitled therefore, to say that it did not take place gain and heavily in debt; and so they were too glad to get out of it and let the King take the territory back, which was done not by a confiscation; but an <sup>act of</sup> voluntary abandonment, which revoked all that they had granted or sold. It is true that a large number of these concessions had been made in the name of the King; though in behalf of the Company; but half a dozen of the grants were by the Company itself, and these were as I have said <sup>and expressly</sup> completely confirmed.

Among the grants made <sup>immediately before</sup> ~~during~~ this later period <sup>there</sup> was by the King; ~~but~~ the greater number by the King's officers; and some by the Company. The one made by the King is of No 54 of the date of 1672 Sept. 17th. It erected a piece of land belonging to Talon into a Barony and Chateaux, and in connection with this creation I cite page 141 and 142 of the 1st vol of Brodeur's ~~manuscripts~~ manuscripts. In these papers we have the

in writing to Colbert as follows (Take in)

So it appears that the Intendant had ~~made~~ established three villages at the expense of the Crown and bought a beautiful piece of land fit for the erection of a Barony; but much more fit if the three neighbouring villages were added to it. Besides all this he had 10000 livres to invest. In consequence of this application there came out an edict of the Kings, which in compliance with the request of his Majesty's officer ~~made~~ added the three villages to his property under the names of Bourg le Roi, Bourg la Reine, and Bourg Falon, and created the whole into a Barony under the condition, however, that there was to be no change of ownership nor division of feudal homage. I cannot say whether Falon bought this land en cens or en fief.
I think the former, as I can find no trace of any full grant of the property.

 If so I cannot believe that he thought when he got his other holding made into the Barony of Des Isles that he was bound to concede it ~~at~~ to any who asked for it. The three villages were of course given with the inhabitants residing upon them and the only right of the owner in them was to exercise the dominium directum according to the contracts; but the rest was his own property. The transaction is a part of the evidence of which I shall furnish abundance of the essentially aristocratic idea that ~~was~~ lay behind the whole settlement of Canada. I speak next of the grants made by the King's Officers. First in 1664, we find two Nos 49 and 50, made by Messrs De Hezy and De Serval.
 The first is a grant to the heirs of a small piece of land near Three Rivers, is most absolute property.
 The next, on the same day

<sup>lands on</sup> is a grant of the River Champlain, short, simple and meaning a great deal. It is to R. Pégard, made in consideration of services & which he that he has rendered his Majesty in this country, and which he continues daily to render of a quantity of land a league and a half in front by a league in depth in the lands, the said River Champlain being ~~along~~ inclosed (the boundary) to enjoy the said tract of land and all comprised therein, as well ~~say~~ woods, <sup>as</sup> meadows, rivers, swamps, rivulets, lakes, isles, islets and generally all contained within the said limits in full property with right of all seigniorie and justice haute ~~roy~~ ~~seigneurie~~ and basse, and to the usual honorary rights of Seigniors of Parishes in the Churches when they shall be built. From that time to 1672 very little was done in the way of granting land.
 What was effected is recorded in short instruments of a kind that we may call location tickets. Nos 50 B. (St Maurice); 50 C (St Michel); 51 (St Marie); 57 to 52 (Sabadie); and 53 Ponte du Lac are of this kind. They are in the shortest possible form

I grant you so - and so, without any more words.
No 16<sup>m 1672</sup> is also of this kind; it is the title of what is now Matane. "We signify to all whom it may concern that we have permitted the Sieur D'Amour to cause a league of land in front on a league and a half in depth to be laid; to wit: to the whole under the good pleasure of His Majesty from whom he will be bound to take confirmation of these presents. and the confirmation is at No 163 with <sup>that of</sup> a great number of other grants.

Next in order come the grants by Talon in more full and correct form from ~~from~~ out of which I begin by mentioning a few which are peculiar.
Of these is No 58 / Lele aux Heron / from which it appears that Zacharie Dupuis had obtained from the Summary of Humboldt a grant of land opposite that Island, with a right of fishery; but he states he has learned that the right of fishery could only be granted by the Crown, and therefore he petitions for Sheron Island in order that he may get the fishery with it. He accordingly got the said

 "Désir aux Sheron with the "adjacent islets, and there "with the right of fishery
 "in the River St Lawrence
 "opposite the said isle
 "and inasmuch as he <sup>said</sup>
 "may be opposite his <sup>said</sup> "cession." Almost at the same time four grants were made in Canada Nos 57; 58; 59 and 60. They are so like others in which I shall presently remark that I here say only this that they are unlike those <sup>commonly</sup> made by Palou in Canada. Of these two give justice; two unjust and base justice only, and they are <sup>chiefly</sup> remarkable as showing again the utter absence of uniformity.
 Upon one however I must

 homage and a gross revenue at each succession according to the Customs of Fexin le Francois.

say a few words because it has been mentioned on the other side. No 56 was given to the Sieur d'Arpentis my son unto justice. He was the son in law of the Sieur de la Tour and put in his claim  $&$  in that capacity. He described
 "Salou as sovereign and
 "proprietor of the River St "Jean from the River Ma "gic to the mines in the said "country of Acadie, and then speaks of his ~~choix~~ choice to pray for a renfe grant rather than claim as heir and executor on account of Salou's failure to clear, and he offers to settle ~~him~~ him self and make improve ments. At all the fail ure to clear is one thing but the failure to make free gratuitous grants to the first comers is quite another

Smith J. But on what authority did the sovereign ciple. It is plain that this is not done ~~or~~ under the act, for that only authorizes the confiscation of one half the property. The whole Country had been granted to D'Aulnais Charnisy, and Latour had a conflic ting claim <sup>in the negative</sup> — all the region had been in the hands of the English, and had been conquered back, sometimes after which went, & comes the Sieur D'Aupentigny, who says I am the Son in law of Latour; I think I might call myself his heir; but I am told the King could claim the land for want of settlement. He does not however, say that the King has claimed it. The truth ~~was~~ <sup>is</sup> that the whole tract of the grants in the tract had lapsed by the conquest and had become the King's again by reconquest, and there was no contradictory party opposing the petitioner, so that nothing was more natural than to give it to the man who seemed to have the only claim.

"said the seignior within a year and "that he will stipulate in the "contracts that he shall "make with his tenants that "they shall be held to reside "within the year and keep "hearth and home on the "concessions which shall "have been granted to them,
 "in default of which he "shall enter of plein droit
 "in possession of the said "lands." While in 1761 (St. Land de la Parade) the clauses and thus: - "At the charge "that they shall continue to "keep and cause to be kept "hearth and home on their said "seignions, and that they "shall stipulate in the con"tracts they shall make
 "with their tenants that they "shall be held to reside within "the year upon these concessions "which shall have been given "them, in default of doing which "they will enter of plein droit "in possession of their lands" Most of these grants were <sup>verbally</sup> made before the deeds passed, and when the deeds did pass the grantees were already residents so that the obligation set is in one case to continue, while it is to be in ~~the other~~ another. From <sup>no</sup> 55 to no 91 they usually give justice, from <sup>no</sup> 92 to no 114 they do not;

~~and~~ but here are two or three grants of which I cannot say whether they give justice or not, for while there is no clause which does so, there is the clause which is necessary to it that an appeal from the local judge shall lie to the Sovereign Court. I do not know which is the error the omission of the one clause or the insertion of the other. ~~Next~~ The Fa vor grants were all or nearly all in 1672, and that Intendant returned to France in 1673 or 1674, and De Frontenac made the rest of the concession of the period of the St. James Company. Of these two or three are peculiar and I shall remark on them par ticularly. Seven or eight are augmentations of grants by Talon; ~~two contain~~ <sup>and</sup> all the some charges <sup>and</sup> conditions; and four or five at the very end of De Frontenac's time are like Talon's long form, with a few slight, but not insignificant alterations. ~~But~~ But now first of the preamble in Talon's long form: it will be found contains a recital with reference of the disposition of the parties to settle and form a settlement. No 55 (D'Arville) will be found at least printed at length in the 1st vol of the Parliamentary <sup>specimen of the</sup> Documents, and is a grant to ~~an~~ officers of the Carignan Regiment and to gentlemen of that rank. In it the King sets forth that being anxious to maintain his character for zeal as <sup>the elect</sup> a true son of the Church and to advance the glory of God, and also to spread the increase and make known his own dignity.

and having judged that there were no surer means to that effect than to compose this colony of persons qualified properly to fill it up, to extend it by their labor and application to agriculture, and to maintain it by a vigorous defence against the insults and attacks to which it might be exposed hereafter, has sent to this country a number of his faithful subjects, officers of his troops in the Regiment of Carignan and others, most of them agreeably to the great and pious designs of His Majesty, being willing to connect themselves with the country by forming therein settlements and seignories of an extent proportionate to their means; and the Sieur De Comporté having petitioned us to grant him a part thereof:

Accordingly he makes the successive petitions for. Here is a shorter form of the same preamble, and what does it signify? Clearly that

who took grants these persons, agreed to form settlements proportioned to their pecuniary means, <sup>perme</sup> at their own expense. They took the land to settle upon it, ~~and~~ and the fact they did so, and did not take it as prepared at the expense of the King, proves I submit that they were to make their own terms with the people they employed in clearing.
 If a man had a large family - tant mieux pour lui. He could arrange with them to form a settlement.
 If he had a great number of dependents, but in what way he accomplished it, he was to make a settlement, and the presumption is that the grantor supposed he had sufficient proof of the capacity of the grantees to fulfil this condition. There is no idea here of conveying to the Seigneur merely a light rent, such as it was proposed to convey to the Seigniors, who might receive concessions of ~~at~~ settlements ~~also~~ made at the expense of the King.
 - who would be merely nominal seigniors and who must therefore be contented with whatever trifling cens they might be gratified with. True these grantees were not generally rich men.

 They were captains or lieutenant nants in the army; but still, it is evident that they were themselves to make the settlements, at their own cost. It would be very singular if they were to expected to do so with no reward or a very insignificant one. But in truth there was nothing to limit the means by which settlement was to be effected; if it were only effected at all. ~~The grantee~~ The grantee is not even bound to any specific amount of settlement within any specific time. But before insisting on this I point I beg attention to the second condition, the words of which once inter-puzzled myself. <sup>the second</sup> condition is that he <sup>grantee</sup> shall x

 The first condition is the
for it homage

shall hold, subject to the customary rights and dues, and agreeably to the Custom of Paris, which shall be followed in this respect provisionally and until otherwise ordained by His Majesty.

— a form of words which was retained for a considerable time and number of years after Talon had disappeared.

After ~~a~~ <sup>the</sup> lapse of that time the ~~words~~ <sup>provisionally</sup> (for provision) ~~is introduced~~ is sometimes dropped and sometimes left in, and the words ~~follow~~ "in this country" are sometimes ~~inserted~~ after followed in this respect, ~~and~~ while at other times the mere mention of the Custom of Paris is continued. Now it is undoubted that the Custom of Paris was introduced by the act which created the N. India Company, after having been partially, at least, ~~made~~ been made the law by the creation of the Conseil Superior. It is not intended here that the Custom of Paris should be so made the law provisionally; but I think the important words are "in this respect" (à cet égard) and that the meaning of the phrase is that His Majesty reserves to himself the right of hereafter <sup>augmenting</sup> ~~changing~~ the rates <sup>payable to him</sup> and the ~~rules~~ <sup>fixed</sup> according to the Custom. & This is entirely in accordance with those ideas of fiscality which I noticed in speaking of the Superior of Canada.

The idea of allowing the King to make what he thought a reasonable amount out of everybody, who took his lands. He was constantly short of money; always felt the expense of a war to be very great; and never ceased his efforts to make it pay its own expenses. The intention of the phrase in question in my opinion, therefore, was just to prevent the Seigniors, when their lands should be come taxable from setting up that exemption from taxation which was pretended by the Seigniors of France. The 3rd condition is to be found only in the grants of justice, it merely provides for appeals, and in some instances the place where the appeal ~~was~~<sup>was to be</sup> was pointed out, while in others it ~~was~~<sup>is</sup> not. The 4th and 5th conditions are grouped together in this way

hence
 before..... subject also to the condition that he shall keep house and home on his said seigniority within one year, and that he shall stipulate in the title deeds which he shall give to his tenants, that they shall be obliged within one year to reside and keep house and home on the concessions which he shall have granted them, and that in default thereof he shall re-enter, pleno jure, into the possession of the said lands.

then comes the 6th and 7th providing that the grantee shall preserve all the oak timber which may be found within the limits of the land which he shall have set aside for his principal manor house, moreover that he shall stipulate in the private grants which he shall make to his tenants, the reservation of such oak timber fit for ship building;

; and shall give immediate notice to the King or to the Royal West India Company of all the mines, ores and minerals if any be found within the limits of the said fief.

The last condition is that he shall leave all the necessary road ways and passages. I take up the feudal clause first, and I submit that it imports no obligation whatever to have censitaires; but on the contrary is a restraint upon doing so. The grantee is to hold keep hearth and home in his Seigniorie within the year, is to continue to do so, and is to stipulate with all who take his lands that they will go and live there. The condition is simply to pass no deed to a censitaire without inserting that clause.

Rondelet Jr. Do you mean that the King desired to give the country out to Seigniors, who as when they had got it were to let it shift for itself?

Mr. Dunken I say that in point of law there was no obligation. Of course de facto they were obliged to concede in order to make any profit. It was present to the mind of every man that they would concede; but they were not bound in law to do it.

in the second condition

Think if you apply the words "subject to the customary rights and dues/ports et redevances" of the payment which the Seigneur was to make to the Crown. Do you think they apply only to the payment to the crown — is the word redevance ever applied to the quit.

Or Mr Dunkin Certainly you know, it has the largest meaning possible, standing for any dues which are to be paid.

Explicative Lafontaine C.F.
It seems to me you find the phrase its proper sense, and you can show hereafter that when the King grants or concede he does so at cas et redevances redevances. Redevance is a word with the largest possible meaning.

Mr Dunkin I shall show presently that the word occurs twice in the same grant — once in describing what is to be paid to the King and again in speaking of what is to be paid to the Seigneur.

As the same the oak tree

Clause like the feudal clause, obliges the Seigneur to impose the same condition on his tenants, and these are parallel <sup>phrases in the</sup> clauses as to the discovery of mines, and the leaving of space for roads. In the condition for the preservation of ~~the~~ oak trees it is remarkable that the obligation is extended only to those which grew upon the principal manor; so that it is plain it was supposed there might be more manors than one. For this as in the other conditions the King is the stipulating party, and the clause can not be pushed beyond its literal meaning - indeed according to all rules of interpretation if it can be read so as to leave the King party free, that is the case in which it must be taken.

I would I could find a great argument to those who say the Seigneur is the absolute proprietor? Can they not say here is a reserve made, of what otherwise would be entirely ours, and if it be not ours why make the reserve?

Lafontaine J. But would it not follow, too, that if there were a seignior covered with oak trees the seignior could not clear at all?

Mr Dunkin All these conditions are to be understood with a certain degree of administrative latitude. They are merely engagements between the King and the seignior to be enforced only at the discretion of the former. If there <sup>had been</sup> ~~were~~ a concession completely covered with oak trees I have no doubt the ~~gr~~ condition would have been taken out in its entirety.

Lafontaine C. J. There is ~~it~~ It has, however, to be recalled with the clause which requires the clearing of the land.

Mr Dunkin There is no such clause in these grants your Honor. That comes afterwards. After this large number of grants by Lalor in a very short space of time he came to those of Fontaine and the rights which were usually granted seem to have been abridged by him. He granted Namuraska with a prescription very much like that of his predecessor; but the two clauses relating to keeping hearts and home are cut down into one, shortened and made to look still less like an obligation to concede than they looked before. The oak tree clause is cut down still more and now appears in this shape "And shall 'conserve the said grants

 "and cause to be conserved
 "by his tenants the oak trees "which shall be found within "the extent of the said places "proper for the construction "of His Majesty's ships." The words about the domain which we met with before, so far from being essential are the first dropped. The word tenancies is left in for some time longer; but at last that goes too, as being really of no more importance; the whole obligation intended to be imposed being simply this: "You "shall preserve the oak trees "on your seigniorie and "make everybody else preserve them.

Rondelet Jr. It thus leads me to conclude that the letters intended that the Seigneur should concede, is the fact that these terms about making the tenants preserve the oak trees is to be found in all concessions. Therefore it must be supposed that it was intended there should be tenants.

In Dunelm they give <sup>the clause in</sup> ~~the~~ <sup>the</sup> ~~word~~ <sup>the</sup> ~~is to be~~ <sup>is to be</sup> found in very few grants. They are merely accidental words where they do occur; for the essence of the conditions imposed are comprised in four injunctions you shall keep ~~the~~ <sup>the</sup> health and home; give notice of the discovery of mines; preserve the oak trees; and leave space for roads — and this no matter whether you retain the land yourself or concede it. ~~It~~ It was supposed that the oak trees, here as elsewhere, were found dispersed through the woods; but the clause did not always relate to oak trees only. Sometimes red pine was inserted by itself or with the oak trees; and sometimes the clause included all wood fit for ship building. Far from making concession imperative, it ~~is~~ must ~~be~~ in its effect have restrained concession by making the possession of land less desirable. Grants <sup>No</sup> 117 (Iles fourcelles); <sup>No</sup> 118 (Recollets Quarts or St Charles); and <sup>No</sup> 132 (Ile de Beauvegard) were made about the same period.

of the same as he may think proper, with all the rights of fief and seignior, and have the same cultivated and inhabited as far as their extent will permit, on condition that he shall pay fealty and homage (foi et hommage) at the Castle of Quebec, agreeably to the Custom of the provostship and viscounty of Paris, and that he shall cause these presents to be confirmed by His Majesty within eighteen months.

That certainly could not bind the abbe to have sub-granted, since he was to dispose of it just as seemed good to him.
 No 118 ~~was~~ is a peculiar grant which required nothing but the keeping of hearth and home; and ~~the~~ <sup>No</sup> 132 is given ~~to~~ ~~the~~ ~~same~~ ~~as~~ ~~the~~ ~~other~~ ~~islands~~

Grant was; to hold, enjoy and dispose of the same, himself, his heirs and assigns, for ever, as he may deem meet, with all the rights of fief and seignior, and cause the same to be well cultivated and settled as far as their extent will permit, subject to the performance of fealty and homage (foi et hommage) at the Castle of Quebec, agreeably to the Custom of the provostship and viscounty of Paris, and to have these presents confirmed by His Majesty within one year from this date.
 In testimony whereof we have signed these presents and caused

The meaning is clearly that the grantee is to get the islands cultivated in the best way he can.
 Mondonlet J. When I spoke just now I had no reference to the oak tree clause Mondonlet J. When I spoke just now I had no reference to the Oak Tree Clause, but in all the concessions of Seigniors which I have seen I find manifested an idea that there were to be tenants, which seems to imply that the land was to be conceded.

Mr Dunken If your Honor will read the grants anterior to those of Salon you will find that of the King or Intendant meant to bind the grantee to have tenants they took a very strange way of showing their intention. There is no such word as tenants there nor any manifestation of intention.

Smith J. What was meant by the land being held en fief and Seigniorie?

Mr Dunken That the grantee should render foi et homage and the other rights due from a vassal to his lord.

Mondelet J. Now If they had no tenants they must have had the honor of being Seigniors without consequence — a queer state of things to suppose.

Mr Dunken Yet nothing was more common in France, since there are three articles in the Customs relating to signatories of that kind. But I do not say there were to be no tenants.

On the contrary. All I say is there was no legal obligation to have them.

Duval J. The practical view is that the French government did not require to be told that no body meant to cultivate square leagues of land.
But if they wanted to make concessions ~~at~~ a legal obligation, so as to have the consequences of a contract why did they not say so?

Duval J. Of course there were to be concessions.
Without them there could be no cens et rentes nor any lots et rentes.

Imbulet J. What is the difference between a legal obligation to concede, and the practical necessity of doing so?

Mr. Dunkin. Why in ~~the~~ the first case it seems according to the Customs notions of my friends on the other side that my clients would be mere trustees, because <sup>they are</sup> these bound to get rid of my land at certain rates, and that, therefore, took only so much interest in the property as <sup>should</sup> remain after making these concessions.

On the other hand I say that took the whole interest with the former merely of making concessions.

The distinction is a most important one. But I shall show presently that so far from any presumption of obligation on seigniors to concede, a resulting from the fact that they could not cultivate their seigniories themselves — so far from that, it was customary to grant in censive tracts of land that no one would think of cultivating & merely with individual resources. There are excessions in censive franchises deep, others a league and a half deep, depths larger than the average depth of seigniories. I shall show too that the domain of the censive was understood to be of a league and

and a half in depth. But that is perhaps less conclusive than the other fact, that the government granted an exclusive a tenure <sup>in fee</sup> which of course every holder could do what he pleased immense tracts of land. This as I have said altogether destroys any presumption of a legal obligation on the part of the Viceroy drawn from the extent of their grant. I am, however, anticipating and I come now to the consideration of grants No 123 (Tombou) No 124 (Pleine du Loup) <sup>No 125</sup> (Pleine du Loup en bas) <sup>No 126</sup> (Lac de la Pêche) No 134 a. (Beaupré Isle d'Orléans, and Saint au Matelot) No 135 (Petite Nation) Most of these are not grants with jurisdiction, but they all mention the rights of fishing and hunting and express the grant very clearly to the extent of the concession on the water front. Thus in No 123 (Tombou) we have it thus: "With all rights of fishing and hunting and the property of mines, minerals

"Lakes and rivers, which "may be found in the extent of "the said concession, over "the whole and nature of the "River St. Lawrence opposite
 "Keok." That is the whole terms of the grant, and it will be noticed that the Company took the precaution of saying expressly that they gave the mines and minerals. The only reservation was an annual to be paid at each annulation with the first homage, and the other conditions were only to be for the clearing within three years, and survey the land.
 I suppose that it was from not having well read these grants that one of my friends on the opposite side supposed these conditions were added to those which had been usual before; but in truth they are instead of all others, & though I <sup>no doubt</sup> ~~am~~ <sup>sure</sup> say that many of the conditions to be found elsewhere might be brought in afterward. I do not mean for instance to say that the law could not have compelled the leave granted to ~~the~~ <sup>leave</sup> ~~road~~; but however, that may be so far from the grantees not having the entire property, the whole was given in the most express and complete manner. There is not a grant in fee and common soccage made since Canada was a British Province without conditions more stringent than these.

The grant of Petite Nation goes still further. It was made to Monsieur <sup>de</sup> La Sal, while he was at Paris and is numbered together with the No (34 et.) Petite Nation of five leagues by five leagues on the Ottawa River, in all property such "ivory and justice, as also "the Lakes and Rivers, mines "and minerals, which shall "be found therein and are "all the <sup>breadth of the</sup> extent of the said "River et même de toute
 "la largeur de l'étendue de "dit fleuve) and also of
 "the batures, isles and
 "islets in the space of the "said five leagues of front "of the said concession "with right of fishing and
 "hunting in the whole ex "cept thereof." That was an <sup>of the previous</sup> ~~estate~~ <sup>occupation</sup> ~~estate~~. In the ~~year~~ <sup>year</sup> a mason once a year was to ~~cover~~ cover it all. Can anyone then conceive that the Bishop de LaVal had less than a ~~perem~~ <sup>perem</sup> estate — it is to be supposed that he bound himself to the grantor to do anything but what he pleased with the land itself.

I shall say nothing to the Court of the style in which ~~these~~ <sup>the</sup> ~~grants~~ <sup>grants</sup> were made dealt with the land of the country, as to grants on censive. When I come to that I shall show not only that these grants are bounded with whimsical considerations conditions like those in fief; but that some of them were much in excess of the rate which it is now said must be the limit.

from the dissolution of the N.
 India Company & the <sup>year of 1711</sup> ~~Company~~

I go at once to the next <sup>period</sup> ~~period~~ of Canadian history beginning with the title after reviewing which I shall have the pleasure to task of commenting upon the jurisprudence.

The period is long and the number of grants made in its course great. There were one hundred and seventy three or more seigniorial grants by the Governor and Intendant of which we have a record, and probably thirty or forty more of which we have none. There were besides ~~seventeen~~ seventeen grants à cens made by the Governor and Intendant.

One seigniorial grant was made on the express authority of the King, given in his Council d'Etat. The King himself testified about the forty six by two or three confirmations in the act and upwards of seventy by single confirmations. Comparing then to the grants in seigneurie it will be found that I have put down nineteen as <sup>to</sup> ~~seventeen~~ <sup>given</sup> unknown terms; but in truth by comparing these grants with those which went before and those which followed it is easy to tell their character. Two of these unknown titles have been, since I compiled my digest

Sixteen had justice, hunting and fishing. One had justice and trade with the Indians.
 Four more had with justice, hunting and trade; <sup>and</sup> Sixty ~~and~~ nine had justice, fishing, hunting and trade.
 As I mention this to show the immoderate variation which prevailed in the style of the concessions, for here are one hundred and twenty four grants which I call ordinary ones, and I find them divisible into the many different classes, which I have mentioned. The grants of the trade with the Indians began to appear in 1684, and may be found first in grants No 181 and 185, where they are made in a manner which implies that ~~they~~
 it had been usual to ~~grant~~ <sup>concede</sup> it before, I think however, though singular by enough there never was such a grant, so far as I can find, up to that date. I believe without standing that the trade with the Indians was more valued than the right of property. Both Nos 181 and 185 <sup>was given</sup> were made to a member of the Sovereign Council at Quebec, ~~who were~~ ~~so and~~ No 184 for his sons; and No 186 was given to another member of the Council. Both of these gentlemen were no doubt desirous of smuggling into their dees the valuable privilege of romance after romance had been made against it. People had been prohibited from going into the woods. They were permitted to deal in peltry no where but at Montreal, Quebec, and the Rivers. Sometimes 100 lives were given for licences to trade for a single year or two. At others the former our even was not allowed to ~~grant~~ <sup>permit</sup> the advantage being ~~that~~ the obtained by anyone whatever. I repeat then that I believe the concession was in the first instance smuggled into these two grants under the pretence that

 pay it there. Probably other seigniors had already combined both their trade winked at, and thereafter it became general. The right of fishing had not been inserted in the early grants; but I think it was there impliedly, and when the justice was given especially, there can be no doubt that the seignior possessed the privilege. Henceforth they made some concessions with and some without fishing, whether with any intention or not, I do not know.

I turn now to the contitions of the concessions.
 I have <sup>classified</sup> spoken of one, hundred and twenty four <sup>or there</sup> being <sup>nearly</sup> alike; but this assertion is to be taken with allowance, for they ~~concessions~~ are transposed in all sorts of ways, and very few of them express the same thing in the same words. I read the lais de Chêne clause and the feu et her clause there are fifty ~~of~~ varieties, some with great difference of meaning; others with very little. Le foi et homage is of course in
